us a floor. The situation is a serious one, and many people will be forced to abandon their homes unless aid is had very soon. Just what can be done to relieve them is unknown. The convention will make a strong demand for an extra session of the legislature to appropriate a fund outright, but Governor Lewelling has declared in advance that he will not do this. Leo Moeros, register of the Wakeeny land office, who is here to-day, says the situation in Western Kansas is serious and calls for speedy action and aid, or many will suffer the pangs of hunger.

A BOLD HOLD-UP.

The Gold Palace of Colorado City Loses $750 in Cash.

A bold robbery took place at the Gold Palace saloon, Colorado City, owned by James Lacy. About midnight two men entered the place with drawn revolvers and compelled the barkeeper to give up everything in sight.

This consisted of $1,000 in money which was in the safe, three watches, a diamond stud, and a couple of rings. The police of this city were notified. There were several men about the place but they were powerless to interfere.

It has since been developed that the men wore masks over their eyes when they entered the place. One of them was about five feet eight inches tall and the other five feet six inches. The occupants of the "club" seem to have been badly scared and did not recover until the robbers had time to get well away from the town. They might have left on several trains early this morning.

The robbers were in the saloon about twenty minutes, and held up everyone who entered. They came in the front way and left the back way. After they had gone the saloon men found a sack of gold that had been dropped behind the "crap" table so that the loss in money was only about $750. The robbers ran up an alley towards Manitou.

A YELLOWISH CLOUD.

A Minnesota Cyclone Causes the Death of Two Persons.

STILLWATER, Minn., July 14.—Three minutes after 3 o'clock this morning a yellowish cloud came up from the West and swept through Stillwater along Lake St. Croix, thence across the lake and spent itself in the Wisconsin woods to the southeast. Two persons were killed here. These were William Anez and Samuel Simpson. They, with others, were at work in the rafting shells of the Atwood mill on Lake St. Croix. The storm struck this building with full force lifting the shed bodily and carrying it into the lake. Anez and Simpson were killed by falling timbers, both being terribly crushed.

Reports from various parts of city show that several buildings were blown away and about a dozen people were injured by flying debris. None of the injuries, however, were so serious as to warrant the belief that they will be fatal. Six or eight boys were fishing at a slip on the lakeside and all were blown into the water, one of them far out, but by prompt work all were saved. Reports from Wisconsin are meager, but beyond the destruction of fences and the unroofing of a few houses, the damage is believed not to be serious. So far as heard from nobody was injured in the neighboring State.

Charges Against Bishop Matz.

NEW YORK, July 14.—The Herald says: Charges have been made at Rome against Bishop Matz of the Catholic diocese of Denver. Father O'Farrell of this city is selected as his successor. The Rev. Michael Culkin, who was deposed by Bishop Matz, is now in Rome pressing charges against his former superior. He has presented several affidavits to the propaganda. In one of them he declares Bishop Matz has persecuted all the Irish priests who were connected with his diocese and that only Germans received fair play from the bishop.

A Sioux Chief Dead.

OMAHA, July 14.—A Bee special from Pine Ridge says: Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horses, the head chief of the whole Sioux nation, dropped dead yesterday at Newcastle, Wyo. He and Little Wound left this agency some weeks ago with a party of sixty Indians to visit their Indian friends, the Crows, at Crow Agency, Mont. By his death, without any lineal descendents, the mantle of chieftaincy falls to Little Wound.

World's Fair Finance.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, July 14.—Auditor W. K. Akerman to-day made a statement of the finances of the Fair from the time of its incorporation to July 1. The total amount of money received by the Fair from its bonds, interest, souvenir coins, concessions and miscellaneous sources, amounts to $21,251,316. The disbursements, including erection of buildings, operating expenses, etc., amount to $20,620,160.

A Discreet Silence.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The acting director of the mint to-day purchased some silver, but for business reasons declined to give out either the amount bought or the price paid until to-morrow.

BUSINESS WORLD.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Commercial Summary.

TWO FAILURES ANNOUNCED.

Brown Palace and Metropole Hotel Lessees Forced to Assign—A Kansas City National Bank Closes Its Doors.

NEW YORK, July 14.—R. G. Dun & Co's. Weekly Review of Trade will say:

There is a somewhat better tone in business, because the money markets are a little less stringent. But it cannot be said as yet that there is any distinct improvement. In every direction the usual conservatism prevails, orders are relatively small, the volume of business is restricted, a waiting policy rules. New York banks have received some money from the interior, but are not yet clear that it is best to retire Clearing House certificates, for there are said to be weak spots which may require liberal extensions of credits. Other countries have drawn less from New York, because their business is restricted. Some gold has come already from abroad and more is expected within the next week, but exports of products do not increase as much as has been expected.

Improvement at Boston is slow, on account of the extreme low rates for money. Shoe shops are short of orders and some have closed. Leather is quiet and tending downward, and rubber goods are dull. There is a lack of orders in cotton goods, woolens are slow and many of the mills are running on short time and the market for wool favors buyers. At Philadelphia it is still hard to place good commercial papers, dealers are hoarding money and little activity is seen in the markets for important products. The unseasonable weather has checked operations in dry goods.

At Baltimore trade in dry goods is not as large as usual and country merchants are unusually cautious.

Trade at St. Louis is very satisfactory with good business. At Denver trade is quiet, and collections slow. Louisville reports easier money and business fair in volume. At Nashville trade is fair and Montgomery improving. At Little Rock business is more hopeful with good crop prospects, and at Columbus trade is fair with collections unimproved, and at Atlanta satisfactory in volume, but collections are very slow. Trade is dull at Augusta, though crop prospects are good, and at Mobile crop prospects are fair and trade satisfactory. Jacksonville reports country buying small, and collections slow, and at Charleston the dry goods trade is fair and money easier, but collections are very slow. At New Orleans little improvement is seen and money very tight, but better feeling prevails, for crop prospects are bright.

The decrease of nearly 20,000 tons in weekly output of pig-iron is not unexpected this season, nor is it an unfavorable symptom. Unsold stocks have increased 10,000 tons, but the markets are dull and concessions common. In the shoe trade shipments again fall much behind last year's and orders are scanty. Reduction of prices in many woolen goods has not brought out large orders and it is believed that most of the mills will be employed only part time for the rest of the year. Sales of wool are not quite two-thirds of last year's, with prices favoring buyers. The exports of products are light, for two weeks at New York being only $13,819,810 against $15,157,750 last year. In June the exports of breadstuffs, provisions, cotton oil, and cattle amounted to $39,705,961 in value, against $43,782,200 for the same month last year, with noteworthy decrease in quantity and most products, though in wheat and oil the loss in value was due to a fall in prices. Speculative markets have not been active during the last week, though wheat is 1¼ cents higher, corn ¾ of a cent higher and cotton ⅛ higher. With small transactions prices have tended upward as the monetary stringency has relaxed.

The treasury has not materially affected the financial situation during the past week and has taken much less than the usual quantity of silver, because but little was offered at the market price. The stock market has been distinctly weak, though without symptoms of a panic and the average decline in active railroad stocks has been about $3 per share.

The failures during the past week were 374 in the United States against 168 last year for the same week, and in Canada 25 against 22 last year.

A BANK FAILURE.

The National of Kansas City in the Hands of the Comptroller.

KANSAS CITY, July 14.—The National Bank of Kansas City, at the southeast corner of Fifth and Delaware, suspended payment at 2:55 this afternoon and is now in the hands of the comptroller of the currency. The assets, President J. S. Chick said this afternoon, will be between two and three million dollars and the liabilities between eight hundred thousand and one million. He is confident that the depositors will be paid dollar for dollar. Five minutes before the usual closing time this afternoon Vice-President W. J. Anderson sent a telegram to Comptroller Eckels at Washington that the bank had suspended payment and asking him to take charge. A few minutes later the following notice was posted on the doors: "This bank has suspended payment and is in the hands of the comptroller of the currency."

Five minutes after the notice was posted a small crowd had gathered around the entrances, but there was little excitement.

"I do not see how the depositors can lose a penny," President Chick said. "Our deposits at one time were about $1,000,000, but they have been drawn down so that they are now between $800,000 and $1,000,000. I cannot tell what our assets are exactly, but they are between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. They are largely in mercantile and bank loans."

Asked as to the bank's future, Mr. Chick said: "That cannot be determined yet. Many of our directors are out of the city and not until they return will a decision be reached."

The National Bank of Kansas City had a capital stock of $1,000,000. At its last statement on May 4 it had a surplus fund of $200,000 and undivided profits of $21,000.24. Its circulation in national bank notes was $45,000, which was secured by $50,000 in United States bonds. It has outstanding loans of about one and a half million dollars. The bank owns the building it occupied at the corner of Fifth and Delaware, together with the furniture and fixtures therein which are worth about $175,000. The bank also owns real estate and mortgages to the extent of about $150,000.

It is announced to-night that as a result of the failure of the National Bank of Kansas City, the Franklin Savings bank will to-morrow make an assignment. The National bank held the cash reserve of the smaller institution and was closely allied in other respects. The assets are about $15,000. James Scammon is president of the bank.

ASSIGNMENT.

Lessees of the Brown Palace and Metropole Hotels Fail.

DENVER, July 14.—Late this afternoon W. H. Bush and N. M. Tabor, lessees of the Brown Palace Hotel company, made an assignment to Frank C. Young. The amount of their liabilities are placed at $650,000, with assets at $222,000. The assets of the company consist principally of real estate, hotel furniture and bills due. This failure was caused by the stringency in the money market and inability to secure extension of their paper.

William H. Bush and N. M. Tabor have made an assignment of all their interests as follows: William H. Bush, personal assignment, assets $58,127, liabilities $105,133; N. M. Tabor, personal assignment, assets $31,100, liabilities $105,000; Brown Palace Hotel company, assets $531,092, liabilities $211,500; Hotel Metropole company, assets $120,000, liabilities $14,000; all made to Frank C. Young. Tabor, Pierce & Co. assigned to C. T. Taylor, assets $100,000, liabilities $70,000.

Losses attending the running of the Hotel Metropole and inability to secure cash is the cause of the assignments.

The hotel buildings are not owned by Bush & Tabor. The assets consist of real estate, stocks in various corporations and hotel furnishings.

It is believed that the assets will materially decrease before liquidation has been effected. The failure will in no way effect the Brown Palace hotel building which is owned by Henry C. Brown and which will not be closed. The liabilities will fall principally in London, where the stock is held. The local banks are involved but to a small amount and are amply secured.

IT DOESN'T GO NOW.

The St. Louis Silver Convention Declared Superfluous.

DENVER, July 14. The morning press of this city will contain the following from the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade, addressed to the commercial bodies of the West and South:

The call for a meeting at St. Louis, Monday, July 17, of the commercial bodies of the southern and western States is hereby withdrawn for the reason that all sections will be largely represented at the great meeting which convenes in Chicago on August 1, and the proposed St. Louis convention would entail an expenditure of time and money which may be saved without detriment to the cause of bimetallism.

THE DENVER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND BOARD OF TRADE.
OLNEY NEWELL, Secy.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Money on call has been easy, ranging from 4 to 6, last loan at 5, and closing offered at 5.

Lower quotations from London caused a rather ... opening of the stock market but outside of Louisville and Nashville which dropped 2⅝ per cent. to 57, there were no declines to speak of. The increased supply of money on call and the fact that a moderate amount of funds was offered on time led to purchases of stocks for both the long and short account. Some of the bears attempted to cover while certain operators who recently espoused the short side took the bull tack. The demand led to a sharp recovery and notwithstanding repeated attempts to bring about a reaction nearly everything on the list showed a net gain for the day, varying from ¼ to 2¼ per cent.

The rise was caused by purchases for investment which have become quite a feature of the dealings. The transactions aggregated 231,873 shares, and the most active stocks were St. Paul, Burlington, Western Union, Rock Island and Sugar. The distinctly easier feeling on the money market encourages the commission houses to branch out a little more in their operations and the fact that there is still a heavy outstanding short interest furnishes a basis for a still further recovery as there are no untoward developments in financial and commercial circles. Speculation left off steady and firm in tone.

Miss Vockey's Entertainment.

There was quite a good sized audience at Durkee hall last evening to hear Miss Ellen Vockey, the dramatic reader. The audience was not greatly pleased however. Miss Vockey shows much training and undoubtedly has the dramatic instinct, but she was very unfortunate in the selection of her programme. The numbers were largely selected from the strongest scenes in some of the most difficult plays and tragedies written in the English language, such for instance as "Macbeth," "Leah, the Forsaken" and "Romeo and Juliet." These would tax the powers of a Cushman, while Miss Vockey has not the quality of voice necessary nor the power of controlling it in the dialogue of such scenes. A programme of such numbers, unless sustained at the very highest pitch, is apt to prove very tiresome. Her recitation, "How Salvator Won," could not have been done better and had the programme been of this class of selections the entertainment would have been very successful.

Little Maud Lovelace sang three numbers that delighted every one. She is piquant and graceful and sings like a bird. Messrs. Ray, Osborne and Harper gave a number of selections on mandolin and guitars that were excellent and deserved the applause tendered.

INDIAN CLAIMS.

El Paso County Indian Raid Claims Being Investigated.

TESTIMONY TAKEN YESTERDAY.

Dr. E. B. Andrews Discusses the Efforts Made to Bring About a Parity of Gold and Silver Since 1873.

The ... claimants ... of El Paso county at the court house yesterday, called together for the purpose of giving testimony in a number of Indian depredation cases. The testimony was taken by a United States commissioner, assisted by a government attorney. The testimony was all concerning the raid of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians in this county in 1868.

Previous to 1891 all claims against the government growing out of Indian depredations went to the Interior department, where they were examined as best they could be and if approved a bill was sent to Congress for the relief of the parties. This was a very slow and unsatisfactory proceeding so that in March, 1891, a bill was passed which permits the court of claims at Washington to adjust the claims. Since this law went into effect there have been filed close to 10,000 cases claiming damages amounting to ... Up to date 615 of these cases have been adjudicated. They claimed damages amounting to over $3,000,000, and about one-third of the amount claimed has been allowed in the cases.

There are a dozen or more cases in this county, mostly for stock run off by the Indians, loss caused by being compelled to desert farms and homes, hay and grain destroyed and in many cases for horses and cattle killed. Among those who have cases, and the amounts asked, are as follows:

David McShane, $2,800; David Grier, $800; Henry Grier, $1,700; Mrs. Marmaduke Green, $1,800; Fleming Nell, $5,000; J. C. Straw, $150; Edward Teachout, $...; A. G. Teachout, $...; Wm. Copelen's estate, $250; John Russell's estate, $...; There are many others.

The commissioner who is taking the testimony is Miss Jennie L. Frazier of Beatrice, Neb. She is accompanied by Mr. C. F. White of Washington, a United States attorney, who examines the witnesses. Most of the plaintiffs in these cases are represented by Mr. T. D. Cobbey, an attorney of Denver, who is making a specialty of these Indian depredation cases before the court of claims. Miss Frazier takes all the testimony on a typewriter and has one of the softest jobs in the gift of the government. She gets $2 for every case and regular rates for typewritten reports of the testimony. The commission was busy all day yesterday and will also be in session to-day.

Testimony was taken in the cases of Mrs. Green, the Teachouts and David McShane yesterday. The Indian raid in 1868 occurred in September. The Cheyennes and Arapahoes were plains Indians but went every year up into South Park hunting. That year they tried to get the Utes who lived in the mountains just west of here to join them in a raid, but Governor Hunt and others persuaded them to keep out of the trouble. The plains Indians returned home down the Ute Pass and as soon as they got out of the mountains began their devilment. The Teachout brothers had a herd of some 300 cattle on their ranch near the Divide and when the Indians struck them they drove them off. Then they began a grand round up all through this part of the county. Marmaduke Green and his wife lived at what we know as Jimmie's camp, and here the Indians got eleven horses and killed another. They destroyed the crops, hay and outbuildings. David McShane lived near the present site of Monument and a mile or so distant lived A. D. Demasters and his brother. They saw the Indians making for the McShane house and knew that Mrs. McShane and the children were there alone. They jumped on a pony, riding double, and started for the house, and as they crossed the open space now the site of Monument, the Indians gave chase and fired over fifty shots at them. Mrs. McShane threw the door open and the frightened pony dashed into the cabin with his double burden. Mrs. McShane had been fighting the Indians off with a gun.

The Teachout boys organized a party of about forty men and gave chase to the raiders. Mr. A. D. Demasters, who was one of the witnesses in the city yesterday, was in the party. He says they followed the Indians to a point about twenty miles east of Bijou basin, but the enemy was becoming so numerous that they decided to turn back. On the return they met a party of about twenty-five Indians and a fight ensued. The whites had eighteen horses killed for them in the scrimmage and three of the party were wounded.

It was like a story out of a dime novel to be around the Court House yesterday and hear the oldtimers tell of their experiences. It was a pleasure to them too, for some of them had not met in twenty-five years before. The commission is occupying the County Commissioners' room in the upper part of the brick building.

THE WHITE METAL.

Dr. Andrews Discusses the Efforts Made In Its Behalf.

In his address at the Summer school last evening President Andrews discussed some of the efforts which have been made by different nations to re-establish the old parity which existed between gold and silver prior to 1873.

There were three monetary conferences held in Europe, the first and last of which were largely inspired by the United States government.

In the United States in 1878 an act passed Congress to restore the old silver dollar to its former place as money, but it was vetoed by President Hayes. Then came the Bland-Allison law which did not restore silver to its former state but it provided for the calling of an international conference. This was of more or less value but there was no plan for international bimetalism drafted at the conference.

Then in 1881 a second conference was called and France, from whom the United States had secured a lot of gold, was chiefly instrumental in calling the nations together. It resulted rather better than the other and showed that there was a good deal of friendship for the white metal. But England, particularly, stood out against bimetallism and nothing tangible resulted.

Then passing on to the conference of last year which was called by President Harrison, the speaker outlined some of its results. He said that practically the only plan which had been ... was the one by Mr. Alfred Rothschild who was one of the English delegates. It provided for the purchase of a certain amount of silver each year on common account, that is to be divided between the nations, each of them to store it or get rid of it the best way they could. But this was very unacceptable to the United States in that it was no step toward bimetallism, and moreover provided for the purchase of only about 20,000,000 ounces per year for all, whereas the United States under the Sherman law was herself purchasing 54,000,000 ounces per year. There was, however, not a very sincere disposition on the part of the English delegates to treat this proposition seriously, and if there had been it was quite possible that many of the difficulties would have been eliminated and something might have come of it. But it was attacked of course and more or less discussed and the author of it became frightened and withdrew. England's delegates did not seem particularly fond of it themselves and it seemed to be the general opinion that it was put forward as a feeler to that public opinion which might consider them hostile to the cause of the white metal. There was not much to it anyhow. Indeed there is not much to be said in favor of any system of buying the white metal and issuing notes against it and then storing the silver instead of putting it into the money of the country.

France's conduct in this conference, the speaker said, had been criticized unfairly. She did not come forward to favor Rothschild's proposition. But her attitude did not to my mind, said he, betray any cooling toward bimetallism, because the Rothschild's proposition did not restore silver to its old place. His plan would have been difficult for the Frenchmen to adopt. They were unwilling to purchase and store silver, but were perfectly ready to go with the other nations to international bimetallism. France will be at the forefront when the other nations are ready for bimetalism.

It was thought best, after more or less debate, that inasmuch as two governments had changed their political heads, that is, England and the United States, since the conference had been called, that it might be wise to defer further action until the statesmen of the new dispensation had time to express their opinions on the subjects at issue. Therefore further action was postponed and the conference was adjourned until next November, at which time it may convene and it may not.

But there has been no certain and specific results as far attained by the conference.

Then the speaker discussed what Austria had been doing in the matter of a hard money basis. Perhaps they would have preferred international bimetallism but they could not have this as the nations about them were gold-using nations. They must have gold or paper convertible into gold. They could not use a bimetallic system under the circumstances and were obliged to be monometallic.

There was an attempt also to make India single standard. This was borne out by the statement of one of the delegates from India at the conference to the effect that it would be impossible to make one nation monometallic without making all of them so. But, continued the speaker, the gold standard can never be made universal because there is not gold enough. The striving now is to make India monometallic and if this strife will go on. It will go on and on until men will finally see the effect of the rise in the value of gold and the depreciation of prices and they will say "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther."

Continuing, he said that the gold taken from this country by Austria was not taken in the usual run of trade but was rather abnormal. Austria had to have gold and she got it. She wants about $20,000,000 to fill out her quota and when the present situation quiets down she will be after it and probably from the United States, and we shall again hear of the large shipments.

In regard to Germany there has been an effort to remonetize from '73 to the present time and it has more or less strengthened the bimetallic party. The speaker thought that Bismarck was now fully converted to bimetallism, but an unfortunate interview with Mr. Kelly of Pennsylvania had caused him to go into his shell. Germany would be ready for bimetallism when the others were.

Turning to England the speaker traced the rise of the bimetallic sentiment and of the bimetallic league which now embraced many of the foremost men of the country. The attention of these men was drawn to the subject by the general fall in prices. In their sagacity they said that such a fall in prices meant something wrong. Then another difficulty arose, the difficulty of trading with India, consequent upon the annihilation of the par of exchange. A good number of failures among manufacturers followed in England. Then India began to erect her own manufactories, it being no longer easier to get goods from England. The sentiment thus grew despite the conservatism of the country. So in 1887 there was a royal Herschell commission organized of twelve men to discuss the relations of the two metals. It did very thorough work and its report contains more wisdom than any book ever issued upon the subject.

They had made their report which contained many remarkable statements favorable to the cause of bimetallism. One was that the French law to 1873 did more to keep the parity of the bullion values at 15 to 1 than anything else. On the question of recommending the passage of a bimetallic law for England they were divided, 6 to 6, but since that time one of the single standard men, at least, had been converted and the vote, if now taken, would be in favor of the adoption of bimetallism.

The speaker passed on to say that the question of bimetallism would soon enter into the Irish question. The rentals were fixed for a number of years in advance, and with the steady appreciation in the value of fundamental money the rents would become very burdensome to bear and could scarcely be carried by the peasantry.

In conclusion he touched upon the four kinds of silver men in the United States: those who believed that the United States should join with other nations in bimetallism; those who were willing, if need be, to drive gold out of the country and place us on a silver basis; those who did not believe that gold would be driven out by this action; and fourth, those who believe in free coinage by the United States but at a higher ratio than 16 to 1.

EXPENSIVE FOR HEIRS.

Making Bequests to Minors by Will Costs Considerable.

It has doubtless occurred to everyone to make a will. Even though his or her worldly possessions may be but trifling, there is a sufficient amount of sentiment attached to it to [illegible] for their proper distribution after death.

This is especially true as regards personal effects. How many of us possess heir[looms] in the shape of lockets, trinkets, rings and snuffboxes, whose only value is that they have been bequeathed to us by some old aunt or uncle long since dead? Very probably they have devised their houses, stocks and bonds to some favorite niece or nephew, but they are too thoughtful of our feelings to leave us entirely out in their wills. So we are "remembered" by the gift of a trifling bauble, which sentiment demands of us to regard as extremely precious.

Yet these good old people are generally ignorant of the expense to which the transfer of such petty bequests will subject their estate if the beneficiaries happen to be minors. For in that case it was the duty of the surrogate—in this state at least—to appoint special guardians to look after the interests of the young legatees until a recounting of the estate has been made.

The remuneration allowed to these persons is frequently far in excess of the value of the bequests. The surrogate has absolute authority to award a special guardian any sum he may see fit. There is a wise law limiting the fees paid to the attorney of an accounting executor, but none prescribing the fees that a special guardian may collect.

Here are a few cases in point: Not long ago an old lady of this city died and left a will bequeathing her property to be divided equally between her son and daughter. She had a grandson also whom she remembered by leaving him an old mahogany bureau that was an heirloom in the family. The boy was a minor, and consequently a special guardian was appointed by the surrogate. The necessary labor entailed upon this man must not have occupied him for 2 minutes at the utmost, yet he was allowed $50 for his services. In view of the fact that the bureau was valued by the appraiser at only $5, the enormity of the special guardian's fee is apparent.

An old gentleman died in Harlem a year ago, leaving a small amount of property to be divided among a host of nieces and nephews, some of whom had attained their majority, while others were minors. For these latter three different guardians were appointed. The old gentleman's estate consisted largely of personal effects and was worth at the most $1,500. The special guardians were awarded $150, which was equivalent to a tax of 10 per cent upon the estate.

In one of the northern counties of the state an old woman died recently, leaving among other bequests a brass locket containing a lock of her hair to a grandniece who was still in swaddling clothes. The trinket was not worth 50 cents, yet according to the law a special guardian had to be appointed to look after the infant's interests. He was allowed $25 for his services, and the old woman's estate had to suffer to that extent. Of course the special guardian in this case was paid for performing a farcical duty, but the surrogate was supported by the law in awarding him the money, and the executors had to pay it.

In each of these cases the money paid out to special guardians might have been saved to the estate if the small bequests to minors had been excluded from the will. Where a person desires to give a token of remembrance to a minor, it is always the best policy to give it personally while living, rather than to bequeath it in a will after death.

The fees of special guardians are a part of the patronage controlled by surrogates, and it is only natural that they should use them to increase their own prestige. That they should invariably make these fees commensurate with the amount of work done by their agents, or even commensurate with the value of the bequests these men are appointed to protect, is out of the question. This should be the case, but unfortunately it is not.—New York News.

Increasing Towing Power.

On some of the French water courses a system of chain haulage has been adopted to assist steam tugs in towing barges up the river against the stream. Briefly, the chain, which is fastened at each end, lies at the bottom of the river. It passes between guides at the stern or bow of the tug, over rollers or guides and round nearly the wh[ole] of the [illegible] pulley or drum, which is driven by gearing from the engines. Leaving this pulley the chain passes over a similar series of rollers between breaking pulleys and is then permitted to fall again into the river.

With a view to increase the speed of the tug, a system of magnetic adhesion has been devised by M. Bovet and has recently been tested on the Seine. It consists essentially in combining in the hauling pulley a magnet, the upper sides of the groove forming powerful pole pieces, which are short circuited when the chain engages in the groove. By this means the pull on the chain and therefore the speed of the boat are increased. One of the towing companies on the Seine is said to have adopted this system.—Detroit Free Press.

Electric Gaslighter.

An efficient and simple form of electric gaslighter has appeared, for which it is claimed that it will only light gas (it will not ignite gunpowder); that it requires no charging and that it is always ready for use. It consists simply of a frictional electric machine placed within a circular chamber, which the pressure of a button causes to spin around and generate the current for producing a spark. As the current is generated, upon releasing the spring of the friction disc it is stored in a metal tube or stem until it is of sufficient strength to produce a brilliant blue spark in a little aperture at the end of the stem. This spark ignites the gas, which must be turned on and played on the stem before the spark is set free. The "lighter" must be instantly removed after the ignition of the gas.—New York Telegram.

Beavers Punish Each Other.

Alexander H. Japp, an English writer, says penal servitude exists among beavers and declares this punishment is meted out to old beavers who have lost their mates and also to "bachelor beavers." These unfortunates are not permitted to live in the community, but have to burrow in the river bank in wretched holes. If Mr. Japp speaks the truth, beavers are immeasurably hard hearted, for they will not permit a rusticated beaver to build a house, but will tear it down when the convict commences operations.

New York as an Exception.

J. E. Baker is in favor of dropping the name "New Whatcom" and employing that of Whatcom, and as a starter he proposes the omitting of the New on all letter-heads, billheads, circulars and advertisements. All the newspapers in Washington persist in ignoring the "New," as no "new" city in America, save New York, ever amounted to much.—Whatcom Reveille.

STEEL THEN AND NOW.

A FEW YEARS' PROGRESS IN THE MANUFACTURE OF IRON ORE.

How the Price of Bedford Steel Has Been Lowered Within Twenty-five Years—Invention That Led to the Modern Processes of Manufacture.

Steel in the notch is now sold at Pittsburg at $23.75 per ton, $1.25 [illegible] a fraction less than 1 cent a pound. In 1867 steel rails at the same mart were $166 per ton; in 1872, $112, in 1882, $48.50, and to-day $29. How has a result so surprising been brought about? Why is it that the United States last year manufactured 1,277,000 tons of steel against 3,079,000 tons produced by Great Britain, with promise that the interval between these two great rivals will widen rather than diminish as the years roll by?

First and chiefly, from the richness and vastness of the iron mines of this country, and the good fortune that many of them, especially in Pennsylvania, Alabama and Tennessee, enjoy in being contiguous to coal beds, and where, as at the mines of the Vermilion range in northern Michigan, fuel [illegible] water transportation charges to the furnace regions are nominal.

The changes made in steel is in the main to be credited to the so-called Bessemer process, first devised by William Kelly, who in 1847, at the Eddyville ironworks in Kentucky, refined molten iron by a blast of air in an acid lined vessel. The English inventor developed this principle of burning the superfluous carbon out of iron until only steel remained with so much ingenuity and boldness that his name is indissolubly linked with the process. While that process is employed in manufacturing much the larger part of our American steel, the open hearth furnaces devised by Siemens and Martin are steadily gaining in favor. The first of them to be built in the United States was erected at Trenton in 1868 for Cooper, Hewitt & Co.

Phosphorus in steel makes the metal brittle, and as many ores of iron, particularly those of the southern states, contain a notable percentage of phosphorus it was an important discovery when in 1879 Mr. Sidney Gilchrist Thomas perfected his so called basic process by which such ores can be made into excellent steel. In England the lime bec[omes] a blessing, the slag from a basic furnace, containing as it does much phosphoric acid, yielding a valuable fertilizer. Mr. Thomas' discovery was first applied in America to an open hearth furnace [illegible] at the Homestead steel works of Carnegie, Phipps & Co. There are now six open hearth steel works in this country. In the adaptation of a particular process to a special ore carrying sulphur, phosphorus or what not, a considerable economy is realized.

Of still more influence in the cheapening of steel is the introduction of machinery in mining both ore and coal, in getting out the limestone to be mixed with the coal and ore and in saving manual labor at every stage of the manufacturing process. At the Carnegie works in Pittsburg is the most elaborate and costly mechanical plant in the world, one machine alone representing an outlay of $1,000,000. Remarkable also is the steady gain in the efficiency of ore, coal and limestone, as furnaces have been increased in size and improved in design. The Engineering and Mining Journal recently gave some details taken from the accounts of a well managed, typical concern. In 30 years ending with 1892 the coal required to produce a ton of pig iron had been reduced 37 per cent, the ore 20 per cent and the limestone 50 per cent. The saving in the manufacture of steel of course parallels these figures.

After the British and German mining engineers had met their American brethren in New York in October, 1890, they visited the leading iron and steel works in this country. What chiefly struck them was the pace at which operations were forced to a finish. The English furnace has a capacity of 30,000 cubic feet, produces daily 70 tons, uses 2,300 pounds of coke to a ton of product, with 150 hours as the time of a furnace operation. The American furnace with smaller capacity, 18,900 cubic feet, turns out 271 tons a day, uses but 1,883 pounds of coke per ton of product, and crowds an operation into 21 hours.

Beyond the causes, metallurgical and mechanical which have cheapened steel are the irresistible forces of business. Competition has become exceedingly keen, and manufacturers these days have to be content with slim profits, and often with no profits at all.

Because it is stronger and tougher than iron, steel long ago ousted iron from use as the material for rails. A steel rail lasts about 10 times as long as an iron one. This, of course, has cheapened rail transportation, and so helped to cheapen steel itself by lowering the freight tolls charged for hauling the ores and fuel needed to make it.

As a material for machinery, steel not only wears better than iron, but can be run at higher speed. What this means in money saved in all the departments of the metal's application would require figures of astronomical audacity to express. And the end is not yet. Nickel alloyed with steel exalts its tensile strength remarkably, as recent tests of armor plate made of nickel steel abundantly prove. Let experiment in the preparation of this alloy come to success, as it undoubtedly will, and we shall see nickel steel enabling the architect and the engineer to take almost as long a stride ahead as when they discarded iron for ordinary steel. The time is at hand when bridge spans can be longer, towers higher, boilers, cars and engines lighter, and when machinery driven quicker than ever will last longer than it does today.—New York Sun.

A Case of Conscience.

Three nights ago, as Watson Brownlow, a late worker in one of the big newspaper offices, was hurrying across City Hall park he was accosted by a husky voiced outcast whose clothes at least had seen better days. "Say, boss, I'm no beggar," began the tramp, "but I'm hungry, and sleepy and must have something to eat and a bed. Here's a ring—no matter where I got it—take it and give me whatever you can for it." Whereupon before Brownlow could utter a word the fellow thrust into his hand a wide, plain, flat yellow ring. Brownlow glanced at the ornament—it was undeniably heavy and bright. Then he glanced at the tramp, who was undeniably dirty and disreputable. Cupidity and conscience began immediate warfare under Brownlow's hat. The contest lasted for a few seconds only, and conscience retired in disorder. "The ring is safer in my possession than in his," said Brownlow to himself, "and if it is stolen property I may be able to restore it to the owner, but this fellow never would." He hurriedly forced a silver dollar into the tramp's hand, thrust the ring into his own pocket and walked rapidly away.

"I am half ashamed of the whole transaction," said Brownlow as he related the experience an hour later to a party of friends in an uptown cafe, "for the more I think of it the more I feel as if I had made myself a receiver of stolen goods."

"Don't worry yourself, dear boy," replied one of the group to whom the mysterious ring had been handed for examination, "this trinket is not so valuable that the loss of it would break the heart of its owner. Any supply house for street fakirs will sell you rings just like this at 60 cents a dozen. The man of whom you bought it employed rather reprehensible methods as a salesman, that's all."—New York Herald.

Education of Senators.

Two members of the senate, Dubois of Idaho and Higgins of Delaware, are graduates of Yale, and Stewart of Nevada and Wolcott of Colorado, the two big silver men from the west, were students there, though neither graduated. Senator Stewart left Yale in the memorable winter of '49 and spring of '50, attracted by the gold fever on the Pacific. Senators Cameron of Pennsylvania, Colquitt of Georgia, and Gray of Delaware are graduates of Princeton. Hoar and Lodge of Massachusetts are Harvard men. Senators Washburn of Minnesota and Frye of Maine graduated from Bowdoin college. Vest of Missouri and Blackburn of Kentucky are, like the vice president, graduates of Danville. The Danville institution, by the way, is known as Center college. It was established in 1819 and is one of the oldest Presbyterian seats of learning in the United States.

Senator Gordon of Georgia was educated at the University of Georgia. Allison of Iowa was educated at the Western Reserve college, Ohio. Senator Gibson of Maryland attended Washington college at Chestertown in the Terrapin State. Calvin S. Brice was a student at the Miami university, Oxford, O., where he graduated. Senator Chandler of New Hampshire is a graduate of the Harvard Law school. His colleague, Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, has received from Dartmouth the degree of A. M. Princeton gave Senator Gray of Delaware the degree of LL. D. in 1889, and Yale conferred the same degree on his colleague, Senator Higgins, in 1893.—New York Sun.

The Cradle of Two Ancient Warriors.

Theocritus in one of his idyls describes how Alcmena washed and suckled the infant Hercules and his brother Iphicles and put them to bed in a big bronze shield, "a beautiful piece of armor which Amphitryon took from Pterelaus when he fallen fell." And as she made the great shield revolve and rock she sang a lullaby, "Sleep, my babes, sleep the sweet sleep from which one awakes! Sleep, my darlings, my bonny boys; happy be your rest and happy live until tomorrow morning! Sleep, my babes!"—Harper's Bazar.

The dates are not yet arranged, but the last exhibition will be on Saturday evening, when the acrobat will discharge fireworks from his airy perch above the lake.

S. Lafayette, who has recently come to this country from Mexico, and who is an expert shot with a bow and arrow, has challenged Percy Stockbridge to shoot against him with his rifle. It is proposed to shoot at threads, cards, etc. The challenge is for $500 a side and 75 per cent. of the receipts. It is proposed to secure the opera house for the entertainment and to give it next Saturday evening.

Take the children this afternoon to the Casino. The regular concert and dance for the children occurs this afternoon and at 5 o'clock Edward Mowry will give an exhibition of trick and fancy swimming in the lake, and will dive from a swinging trapeze. The children last Saturday enjoyed the music and dancing especially arranged for them, and with the additional attraction of the swimming there should be a large crowd present to-day.

The finest concert of the summer is promised at the Casino next Sunday evening. Visitors in the city at present are Herr Albert Krisztinkovich, a pupil of Liszt, and Count Oscar von-Vojnich, both fine pianists. They have been traveling through Colorado for pleasure and have consented to prolong their stay until to-morrow and to play at the Franko concert Sunday evening. Miss E. Grace Paul of Louisville, Ky., a renowned soprano singer, will sing a number of Hungarian songs and also Gounod's "Ave Maria."

Two boys broke out of the city jail between midnight and morning yesterday. They were John Mathews, arrested for complicity in the burglary for which Tebbe Keller was arrested; and George Hudson, who was arrested on Thursday with a lot of jewelry in his possession which he is suspected of having stolen. The boys got the leg of a chair and pried open the bars of their cage sufficiently to admit of passage. Then they let themselves down to the ground with a rope made of strips of the blanket of the bed.

Mr. Edwin G. Dexter, director of the Summer School, has issued a circular to the physicians of the city calling their attention to the course in the school offered by Dr. A. Coppen Jones in bacteriology. Dr. Jones is a graduate of the Royal College of Science, London, and for several years has devoted his time to bacteriological work. Much of this time has been spent in the laboratory of Dr. Koch. The subject should be of very great interest to Colorado Springs physicians.

The raid on the Mound Valley bank at Condon, Kan., is attributed to the remnant of the Starr gang. The Denver Times is responsible for the following: [illegible] alleged to have been made by one of the robbers while robbing the bank: "I guess you've heard of Henry Starr. Well, Starr once said he would do a bit of work up in this neighborhood, but he's confined to his room just now. In fact, they gathered him in at Denver and have got him jailed at Fort Smith. We need the money to get him out and more too. We will get him all right."

Finnegan, field director of the Denver Athletic club, has ambitious dreams of organizing a hose team in Denver that will astonish the world, according to the Denver Times. After careful practice he would challenge the champions of this city, and add another athletic scalp to the athletic wigwam of the D. A. C. Then he would get up a big meeting at Denver this fall and bring all the track organizations together.

Dr. Andrews's last lecture occurs this afternoon at the High school auditorium at 3 o'clock. The subject is, "Some Current Errors Touching the Silver Question." There will be no charge for admission and there should be a large audience present. These lectures of Dr. Andrews are very timely and have proved intensely interesting. To Dr. Andrews and his class the people of this great State are looking for assistance in this hour, and the people will show their appreciation by turning out to hear him. It is the last opportunity.
